We have designed these lesson plans so that, if you wish, you can have the plan in front of you as you teach, rather than a copy of the book. Each page of the book is illustrated in the plans together with some suggestions for teaching. These have been divided into questions and discussion that you may have before the children read the book and after the children have completed the reading. Some of you may prefer to explore the meaning and the language in more detail before the children read. Your decisions will depend on the gap between the children's current knowledge and the content, vocabulary, and language of the book they are about to read. Remember that the more information the children have up front, the easier it will be for them to read the text. However, this does not mean that you should read the text to them first.

We have addressed four areas that we think are important in developing good readers. As well as comprehension and decoding, we have addressed the issue of children being able to analyse and use the texts they read. The symbols below guide you to the type of question or discussion.

This symbol relates to comprehension (meaning maker)

This symbol relates to decoding (code breaker)

This symbol relates to critical analysis (text critic or analyser)

This symbol relates to use (text user)

Cover & Title Page

The Biggest

Fish Ever

Ask the children to look at the cover and title page and predict what this story will be about. Explain that it is a fiction text. Discuss the difference between fiction and nonfiction. Have any of the children gone fishing before? What is good about fishing?

Encourage the children to think about their reading strategies. Discuss what they do when they need to decode an unfamiliar word.

Ask the children to look at the picture and predict who these characters might be and how they are related. What might they be talking about?

Explain that this book is a narrative and that a narrative has a problem that is resolved by the end of the story. Ask the children to think about what the problem might be as they are reading.

AFTER READING

Ask the children what the boy asked his Grandpa and how long Grandpa's story went on for. Have them refer to the text to answer. Ask the children to point out the word ever. Ask them to spell it without looking at the text, then place it into sentences to clarify meaning. Ask the children to find the y-ending word story. Identify the contraction didn't. Which two words it is made from?

BEFORE READING

Ask the children what Grandpa is thinking about. How do we know he is thinking? Discuss the thought bubble.

Explain to the children that punctuation helps make stories readable. Punctuation tells us when to stop, start, and use expression. Look at the punctuation on page 4 and discuss its use.

Grandpa sat in his big, soft chair. "It was when I was about your age I was still in the village, with my mother and father. I often went fishing out at sea, like the other people in the village. One day, I caught a special fish. It was a big fish. It was a biggest fish I have ever seen in my life."

Ask the children how old Grandpa was when he caught the fish. Ask them to locate the information in the text. What did most people in the village do?

Ask the children to find the word about. Have them place it in sentences to clarify meaning. Have the children locate the word big. Discuss synonyms as words with similar meanings. Brainstorm synonyms for big.  The Biggest Fish Ever

Colourful Snakes

Don't Let the Mice Drive the Bus!

Ask the children what the boy asked Grandpa to do. Ask them to point out the boy's words. Discuss the use of speech marks in direct speech.

Ask the children to point out the word all, then spell it without looking at the text. Have them count the syllables in the word Grandpa.

Can the children predict some text for this picture? Encourage the children to use vocabulary and style similar to that of the author.

I was about to leave him to sleep, when he spoke. His voice was soft and he didn't open his eyes. "It was a battle I know I will not forget, ever. I was a small boy in a small boat, battling a huge fish," said Grandpa.

Ask the children what Grandpa was having a battle with when he was a boy. Talk about what it might have felt like battling with such a big fish. Ask the children to find the word know and identify the vowel digraph – ow. Have them name the silent letter in this word, then discuss other words with the same silent letter.

Can the children predict what the problem in this narrative will be? How will it affect the main character, Grandpa?

Ask the children what they think is happening in this picture. What do they think all the fishermen are going to be talking about today? How might Grandpa be feeling at the moment? Ask the children to tell you what they think of this story so far and give their reasons. Do they think the author has come up with a good idea for a story?

I looked in Grandpa's eyes. "Did you let the fish go?" I said.

Grandpa smiled at me. "Life was not the same then. You could not just go down to the shop and get a pizza. You had to feed your mother and father and all the people in the village. We dished for dinner. I could not let go of the biggest fish I have ever caught!"

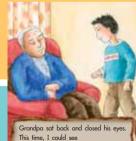

Ask the children why Grandpa could not have let go of the fish. What does this tell us about how the people in his village lived? Ask the children to identify the words mother and father. Look for the word caught and discuss its variant vowel. Talk about the silent consonants gh and list other words with the same feature.
